Silence Dogood, No. 1. Printed in The New-England Courant, April 2, 1722. The first issue of James Franklin's New-England Courant appeared on August 7, 1721, at the height of the inoculation controversy in Boston. 9 Because the Mathers supported inoculation, the Courant opposed it; and the paper's lively, combative essays and verses were soon directed also against the clergy, the magistrates, the postmaster, Harvard College, men of wealth and property—in short, against the whole ...
