BBC - History - Overview: The Vikings, 800 to 1066

The Norsemen are pagan peoples with a Germanic heritage who inhabit Scandinavia, comprised of the realms of Northvegr and Danmark. Their naval superiority allows them to raid the coasts of the other kingdoms, but despite their reputation as blood-thirsty looters, the Vikings are excellent traders that have begun to colonize the frozen islands of the North Sea.

The 'Viking Age' began somewhere around the year 793 until the Norman conquest of England about 300 years later. Though that seems like a long time ago, the idea of using the Viking as a representative of a football engaged in competitive field battle—to such aggravated nuts that could somehow be offended—is no great stretch in 2020.
